ABOUT THE LEADING EDGE SERIES

This program is part of a series of full-day workshops that focus on current issues in leadership within the context of higher education and community service. Workshops have been designed for leaders who want to further develop skills to work more effectively, to solve complex problems, and to achieve successful results. Leading Edge workshops are open to interested professional staff and faculty from SUNY Buffalo State and other institutions of higher education as well as to organizations that provide community-based services. Sessions are limited to 20 participants and will be facilitated in a highly interactive and experiential learning environment. Programs include self-assessments or feedback instruments that provide insights about individual style preferences related to the focus of each particular workshop.

Registration

The cost for non-SUNY Buffalo State employees is $350. Price includes all conference materials, assessments, parking, lunch, and refreshments.

To register, go to:
http://continuingstudies.buffalostate.edu/change-leadership-collaborative

About the Facilitator

Tim Switalski is responsible for creating learning programs for professional staff and faculty focusing on leadership. In addition to this half-time position, he is founder and president of Darwin Associates, a consulting firm focusing on organizational evolution and development. Tim is a master facilitator, trainer, and coach with more than 35 years of international experience. He holds a master of science degree in creativity from the International Center for Studies in Creativity at Buffalo State. Tim is a founding member and program director for CREA Conference held annually in Sestri Levante, Italy. He is also a founder and partner with the Center for Certification in Creativity, which focuses on developing creative leadership for executives throughout Latin America.